TO REHABILITATE MARQUESAS ISLAND
HONOLULU, T. H., Sept. 21—The French administration of the Marquesas Islands is to attempt to rehabilitate the inhabitants and to elevate them morally and materially, largely as the result of the visit of the Bayard Dominick scientific expedition to the group two years ago under the auspices of the Bishop Museum of Honolulu, according to a letter received by Dr. E. S. Handy, ethnologist on the museum staff, from G. de Boyen Belleisle, the administrator.

Doctor and Mrs. Handy spent a year in the Marquesas investigating the civilization, culture and characteristics of the inhabitants as a part of the museum's efforts to trace the origin of the Polynesian race.

The administrator's principal purpose is to develop commercial opportunities for the natives and to establish schools, the latter said. The commercial development depends upon direct steamship connections between San Francisco and the Marquesas, which have been the scene of much of the popular literature purporting to portray the languid life of the South Seas. Such connections would enable the natives to eliminate the middle-man at Tahiti, who have reaped enormous profits from the efforts of the Marquesans, Doctor Handy said.

"Commercially, the Marquesas present great possibilities," he added. "There are many extensive valleys of unsurpassed fertility, which formerly supported a dense population. These were cultivated by the natives and produced breadfruit, taro and bananas. Today all is neglected, there being only scattering coconut plantations."

There are a number of excellent harbors in the Marquesas, Doctor Handy said. He also expressed the opinion that some day fueling stations might be established there for vessels passing between Australia and Panama.

DIFFERENT ADVICE PERPLEXES SCOUTS

LONDON, Sept. 21—It would appear to be the fate of Boy Scouts the world over to have to listen to good advice from their elders. In England the boys take it good humoredly and patiently as all in the day's work.

But recently a group of Scouts must have been perplexed, as well as amused, when the good advice from two speakers did not in the least agree. They had come into Bedford to attend church. The vicar, the Rev. A. O. Cheney, addressed them. He warned them against smoking as "a dirty and disgusting habit."

He told them to remember to keep the Sabbath day holy and not to go about "making a noise and disturbing the villages." (The boys had marched to church headed by bugles and drums.)

Nor, he said, should anything be done on Sunday which entailed extra work for anyone. (The villagers had agreed to entertain the visiting scouts to tea.) The vicar said he never entertained anyone on Sundays; people should stay at home on Sunday and help along the activities of the church.

After the service Lord Amphilil got his turn at the boys. He said that smoking had been helpful to some of the greatest men in the world. One of the wisest philosophers used to smoke like a chimney. But, of course, it wouldn't be right for small boys to smoke.

He always entertained his friends on Sunday, he said. He honored God by going to church Sunday morning, but afterward he sometimes did a bit of carpentry. The idea of Sunday, he told the boys, was that it should be a day of rest which meant abstention from ordinary work. Manual labor on Sundays rested him rather more than anything else because, during the week, he had to attend a good many meetings in hot stuffy rooms.

So long as they did not disturb the peace of their villages, they need have no compunctions in turning out on Sunday to pay a friendly compliment to a new troop.

One of the grownups suggested that the peer and parson should hold a public discussion on the subject, the proceeds to be divided equally between the church and the Scouts.
